

Pre-Lecture Quiz, Chapter 12, Antifungal and Antiparasitic Drugs

Multiple Choice

1. Which of the following fungal infections would be classified as systemic?
  1. Thrush
  2. Pink eye
  3. Meningitis
  4. Vaginitis

Matching

1. Match the parasitic infection in Column A with the organism in Column B

1. Helminths	A. Malaria mosquito
2. Protozoa	B. Tapeworm
	C. Giardiasis
	D. Toxoplasmosis

True/False

1. When amphotericin B is given via IV infusion, there are no special recommendations for its administration.
2. Acidic foods may interact with the drug chloroquine, which will increase the drug's excretion.
3. Parasitic infections are often times treated at home with drugs.
4. Reinfection is rarely concern when parasitic infections are treated by family.
5. Antifungal treatment of superficial infections typically has minimal adverse reactions.

Fill in the Blank

1. Infection of the mouth by Candida albicans is often diagnosed by _____ and soreness.
2. _____ oil and _____ are used as herbal antimicrobial agents for cuts/stings/wounds/burns/acne.
3. To monitor for renal damage in clients receiving amphotericin B, serum _____ and _____ levels should be drawn and checked frequently.